19TH ANNUAL NASC SPORTSMAN-LEGISLATOR SUMMIT AGENDA

6:00-8:00pm Welcome Reception

Location: Simms Fishing Headquarters

This year's Welcome Reception will be hosted at the Simms Fishing headquarters. Opening remarks will be provided by CSF President Jeff Crane and NASC Executive Council President Rep. Brian White. Heavy hors d'oeuvres will be served as attendees are given a tour of Simms' wader manufacturing site. Shuttles to and from the Kimpton Armory Hotel to the Simms Fishing headquarters will be running from 5:45 until 8:15 p.m.

Presented by: Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation and the NASC Executive Council

Sponsored by: Montana Game Wardens Association; Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation; Simms; Sitka Gear; and Southwest Montana Chapter of Safari Club International

8:00-8:15pm Break to Return to Hotel

The last buses will depart Simms Fishing headquarters and return to the Kimpton Armory.

8:15-10:00pm Cigar Reception

Location: Sky Shed

The evening is not over yet, as activities will continue with a cigar reception hosted by Reynolds American. A variety of cigars, hors d'oeuvres, and liquid refreshments will be provided, signifying the kickoff of this year's NASC Summit. Attendees are encouraged to join their colleagues for a toast to an eventful week ahead and discuss the topics they're looking forward to learning about in the coming days.

Sponsored by: Reynolds American, Inc.

19TH ANNUAL NASC SPORTSMAN-LEGISLATOR SUMMIT AGENDA

Wednesday, November 30

7:00-8:00am Breakfast

Location: Sky Shed

Sponsored by: Wild Sheep Foundation and Montana Wild Sheep Foundation

8:00-8:10am Conference Convenes – Welcome by CSF

Location: Armory Music Hall

CSF staff will welcome attendees to the conference and discuss major trends in the NASC network through time and the work that lies ahead.

Presented by: Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation

8:10-8:45am Welcome to Montana

Leaders of the Montana Legislative Sportsmen's Caucus will welcome attendees and discuss some of the Caucus' recent victories. This session will also feature remarks from the Director of Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks who will discuss the wide range of hunting and fishing opportunities the state offers, among other topics.

Presented by: Montana Legislative Sportsmen's Caucus and Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks

Sponsored by: Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries and Sports South

8:45-9:15am Opening Remarks

In many states, non-resident college students are unable to afford the cost of hunting licenses which has implications for the future of hunting. Through a cooperative and collaborative approach, we successfully passed legislation in Montana which allows non-resident students to purchase resident rate hunting licenses. The combination of effective and unique partnerships, respect for a process-oriented approach, a willingness to seek and follow advice, and robust student participation were keys to our success. We will share lessons learned during our passage of this legislation while highlighting the collaborative nature and learning opportunity we were given.

Presented by: Professor Joshua Millspaugh, Boone and Crockett Professor at the University of Montana

9:15-10:30am Celebrating and Protecting the Success of the North American Model of Wildlife Conservation

9:15-10:00am Discussion on Differences Between Wildlife Management in America and Europe

This session will explore the differences between the North American Model of Wildlife Management and how wildlife is managed in the United Kingdom. Two tenets central to wildlife management in the United States, the public trust doctrine and the prohibition against market hunting, are not components of wildlife management across the pond. As the commercial sale of wild venison has been debated in some states recently, this session will compare the pros and cons of each management model with perspectives provided by a U.S. certified wildlife biologist and UK-based chef, restaurateur, and hunter.

10:00-10:30am Changing the Game on Poaching: Ensuring the Punishment Fits the Crime

Sportsmen and women know hunting is not poaching, and that poachers are thieves, not hunters. Poaching goes against all that we hold sacred as law-abiding sportsmen and women and undermines the entire foundation of the North American Model of Wildlife Conservation. However, poachers are not always treated as such under our laws. Wildlife cases are disproportionately dismissed, and penalties are often applied inconsistently. The Boone and Crockett Club's Poach & Pay Project aims to develop a better understanding of the scope of the issue and provide specific actions to increase the prosecution and penalties for wildlife crimes. The Poach & Pay Project works with state wildlife agencies, legislator and judiciaries to improve the detection and conviction of poachers and to ensure that the fines being assessed for this illegal killing are in line with the value our society places on its wildlife.

Presented by: Boone and Crockett Club and Wildlife Management Institute

10:30-11:00am Fellowship and Refreshment Break

Join us for a refreshment break in the exhibitor area and stop by exhibitor booths to enter a raffle.

11:00-12:00pm Building and Maintaining Effective Sportsmen's Caucuses

This session will feature a moderated discussion with leaders of state legislative sportsmen's caucuses as they reflect on best management practices and lessons learned in their efforts to maintain highly effective and relevant entities to protect and advance the interests of their sportsmen and women constituents.

Presented by: Arkansas Legislative Sportsmen's Caucus; Delaware Legislative Sportsmen's Caucus; an NASC Executive Council

12:00-1:00pm Lunch

Location: Sky Shed

Montana Governor Greg Gianforte will be joining this year's NASC Summit to welcome all attendees and highlight the many sporting pursuits and natural wonders that Big Sky Country has to offer. As a valuable member of the Governors Sportsmen's Caucus, Governor Gianforte will provide remarks on how sportsmen and women are a vital part of Montana's cultural fabric.

Presented by: Governors Sportsmen's Caucus

1:00-2:00pm Executive Council Candidate Speeches

Location: Armory Music Hall

The NASC Executive Council Nominations Committee Chair Senator Robin Webb will moderate this session which will provide candidates for the Executive Council an opportunity to provide brief remarks on their work with the respective caucuses and why they wish to be considered for the Executive Council.

7:00-8:00pm Dinner

Working Together to Protect the Freedom to Hunt

Frontal assaults and backdoor attempts to undermine regulated hunting and the North American Model of Wildlife Conservation are unfortunately the status quo today on the state and federal level. From access related issues to trophy importation bans, to predators, the list goes on and, through it all, SCI remains First For Hunters. This session will focus less on the historical background of these issues and more on the current and ongoing threats to sustainable hunting. Safari Club International (SCI), the leader in protecting the freedom to hunt and promoting wildlife conservation worldwide, works with the sporting community, elected officials, and SCI members to ensure wildlife management decisions are based on sound science, not emotional sentiment or politics.

6:00-8:00pm Auction & Raffle

This year's auction and raffle, which will be held during the reception and dinner, will feature a wide array of hunting, fishing, and shooting items and excursions. Attendees will have the opportunity to take advantage of some great deals to wrap up their holiday shopping, or perhaps to begin planning for trips afield next year, all while supporting the work of the Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation in strengthening the NASC network.

8:00-8:15pm Break to Move to Movie Night

8:15-9:30pm Movie Night - "Killing the Shepherd: The Last Keeper"

Location: Armory Music Hall

Scotland has seen generations of war. Today the war is different. Gone are swords and muskets, replaced by government policies pushed by groups staffed by Scotland's urban elite.

Reminiscent with the acts of genocide during the Highland Clearances after the battle of Culloden in 1746 there is a modern effort to remove rural folks from the land. The targets are gamekeepers, ghillies, and deer stalkers whose families have been working the land, in some cases, for centuries. The land provides jobs and wages which they use to buy food and pay bills; keep families living in small communities filling local schools with children; and providing active wildlife and habitat management.

It's a war for control. It's basically class warfare. It's a war where wildlife biodiversity and habitat conservation may be a thing of the past.

19TH ANNUAL NASC SPORTSMAN-LEGISLATOR SUMMIT AGENDA

Thursday, December 1

7:00-8:00am Breakfast

Location: Sky Shed

Wolf management is a polarizing and confrontational topic regardless of which side of that topic you're on. While "preservation" based management plans are utilized in our national parks and areas where wolves remain listed under the Endangered Species Act (ESA), conservation is the management concept used to manage wolf populations in most of the Northern Rocky Mountain Distinct Population Segment (NRMDPS) area. While news media and preservation groups portray a gloomy return to extinction, wolves continue to not only thrive but far surpass management objectives multiple times over. Sportsmen and concerned citizens have banded together to form a 501(c)(3) nonprofit called "The Foundation for Wildlife Management" (F4WM), in an effort to educate the public on the factual status of wolves and wolf management as that relates to the recovery goals and management objectives established by the US Fish and Wildlife Service (the actual data may surprise you). F4WM Executive Director Justin Webb will explain who F4WM is and how they are assisting State Game Management Agencies in meeting their wolf management objectives. He will share why he believes the Endangered Species Act and Equal Access to Justice Act reform may be a vital part of continuing to manage game populations using the North American Model of Wildlife Conservation.

Fighting Back Against Misguided Opposition to Active Timber Management

Hunters understand the importance of active management to the maintenance of wildlife habitat and hunting access, but are the habitat needs of wildlife, particularly on public lands, being overshadowed by interests opposed to active forest management? This session will explore the history of environmental NGOs opposing wildlife habitat improvement projects on federal lands and the growing trend of increased opposition to habitat work on state-owned lands. To combat this alarming trend, speakers will provide policy recommendations that attendees can employ in their home state to support strong wildlife populations and provide quality experiences for hunters.

Invasive Carp

This session will provide an overview of the current work being done by state and federal wildlife agency partners and NGOs in the 31 states in the Mississippi River Basin to eradicate, manage, and control aquatic invasive species, with invasive carp being the number one problem. The discussion will cover how the formation of the Mississippi River Basin Fisheries Commission will make this, and other interjurisdictional fisheries management issues, better.

Presented by: Mississippi Wildlife Federation

Trapping: Deeper Than You Think

John Daniel, President of the National Trappers Association, and Jason Wisniewski, Director and President-Elect of Fur Takers of America, will provide an in-depth look into how a management program that includes trapping not only benefits game species, but other species as well, and how it contributes to a healthy ecosystem. They will also look at the economic benefits trapping provides for manufacturing, local economies, and foreign trade, as well as the many similarities it shares with other pursuits, such as deer hunting, fishing, and turkey hunting.

Presented by: Fur Takers of America and National Trappers Association

Dedicated Conservation Funding

This session will feature a conversation with leaders in the Louisiana and Mississippi Legislative Sportsmen's Caucuses who spearheaded passage of the Louisiana Outdoors Forever Program and the Mississippi Outdoor Stewardship Trust Fund in 2022. Enactment of these new state conservation funding programs demonstrated active collaboration between sportsman-legislators and sportsman-led coalitions. This new funding will help these two states leverage partnerships to deliver more habitat and opportunities for hunters and anglers.

Wild Sheep: Status, Challenges, and Opportunities

Bighorn sheep currently occur in 16 western states, and ~50% of all Dall's sheep live in Alaska. Wild sheep spend much of their year on public lands, but in many states, private/state lands also provide important seasonal habitat. Wild sheep face a variety of management challenges, including habitat loss/fragmentation, diminishing water availability, respiratory pneumonia often following contact with domestic sheep and/or domestic goats, predation, and other challenges. Strategies and opportunities have been identified in many western states, to restore wild sheep populations and enhance wild sheep habitat.

Presented by: Wild Sheep Foundation

The End of Wilderness Expansion and Use Restrictions in the West

This session will discuss past and current Administrations' efforts to expand federal control on public land with specific targets in the West. The discussion will also cover how these actions create a burden on state land managers, amplify states' challenges to manage public lands, and further diminish tools to expand access, cooperation, and coordination at the local level.

Presented by: Arizona Game and Fish Department

Impacts of the Overpopulation of Horses and Burros in the American West

Wild horses and burros are at four times Appropriate Management Levels and are threatening native wildlife populations (bighorn sheep, mule deer, sage-grouse, etc.) in numerous western states. Congressional action is needed to allow for proper management of horses and burros by the Bureau of Land Management and the U. S. Forest Service. Inaction will reduce opportunities for sportsmen in the affected states.

Incentivizing Landowners vs. Privatizing Elk - A Delicate Balance

Across the west, elk distributions are becoming a growing problem. Landowners deserve incentives for allowing public hunting access and/or providing quality wildlife habitat, and in some cases need assistance when publicly owned elk become a nuisance. However, some fear the wrong incentives will make the issue even worse by leading to more hoarding of the public resource and encouraging more exclusive pay-to-play access.

Grizzly Bear Populations, the Endangered Species Act, and Delisting

The USFWS has been petitioned by Governors from Montana, Wyoming, and Idaho to have the grizzly bear delisted from the ESA list. The requirements to be delisted have been met and populations are expanding, but litigation and politics keep the bear listed. What can be done to remove the protected status of the ESA from the grizzly? The states are prepared to take over management and already have a tri-state agreement in place, that even includes genetic diversity.

Findings and Recommendations of the Aquatic Invasive Species Commission

The continued spread of Aquatic Invasive Species (AIS) poses a key challenge to sportsmen, conservationists, and state Departments of Natural Resources. This session will share findings from the AIS Commission, which will soon release its findings and policy recommendations from months of consultation with leaders in federal policy, state agencies, recreational user groups, and leading invasive species scientists. This presentation will explore the state-level impacts of these recommendations to prevent, control, and eradicate AIS.

Are Wildlife and Sportfish Restoration Funds "Slipping" Away?

The rise of the internet provides consumers with convenience and frequently lower prices, but also provides a way for many foreign products to be sold into the U.S. without the required Wildlife and Sportfishing Restoration excise taxes. Direct-to-consumer purchases of taxable products from overseas vendors represents a significant, and growing threat to conservation funding and achieves an 11% unfair advantage over U.S.-based businesses that are paying the conservation tax. This situation threatens fish and wildlife conservation funding for state fish and wildlife agencies as well as the existence, profitability, and support of law-abiding businesses in the U.S.

Improving Relationships Between Sportsmen and Landowners

Sportsmen and landowners share an interest in the future of wildlife in the United States. Private lands provide valuable habitat for wildlife, often coming at a cost to the landowner. Sportsmen play an essential role in managing wildlife and funding state agencies. Unfortunately, the relationship between these two groups is often strained over issues including access, target populations, and disease transmission. Join us for a session to explore lessons learned on how to improve relationships between sportsmen and landowners.

Current Conversations Around Inclusivity in State and Tribal R3 Efforts

The states and the tribes are the two primary entities responsible for Fish and Wildlife Management (and hunter management) for the majority of the land mass in America. This session will present science-based data on participation trends and case studies on what states and tribes are currently doing to provide opportunities to historically underrepresented communities in our shared outdoor heritage. The session will also identify gaps and needs within the policy space that legislators can assist with and provide first-hand testimonials.

4:00-5:30pm Scouting Report: MRI to Inform 2023 Targets

The Aftermath of Bruen: What it Means for State Firearm Laws & What to Expect for the 2023 Legislative Session

In the landmark decision of NYSRPA vs. Bruen, the U.S. Supreme Court established a new precedent and standard for evaluating the constitutionality of firearm laws throughout the country. Since that decision, there has been a flurry of new cases to reevaluate state firearm laws. This panel discussion will shed light on how the Bruen decision might impact firearm laws in your state, along with insight on what to expect for the 2023 legislative session and ways to proactively advance legislation to protect recreational shooting.

Predator Wars: Lesson's Learned from Fighting Anti-Hunting on the West Coast

The West Coast continues to make national headlines with the increased frequency and egregiousness of anti-hunting efforts at all levels of government. Whether it's Oregon's Initiative Petition 3, which would ban all hunting, fishing and trapping, or Washington's sudden suspension of the 2022 Spring Bear Season, or California's ongoing attempts to shut down bear hunting altogether, the West Coast continues to be at the forefront of discussions surrounding the sustainable conservation of America's predators and the role that sportsmen and women play in their management. This panel discussion will highlight how the sportsmen's community in California, Oregon, and Washington are pushing back against these efforts, and steps that can be taken now to be prepared should the fight come your state next.

Priorities for Hunters and Anglers in the 2023 Farm Bill

As part of an omnibus bill that covers everything from federal crop insurance to the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (formerly known as Food Stamps), the U.S. Farm Bill's Conservation Title represents the single largest federal investment in private lands conservation in the nation. Reauthorized every five years and currently set to expire in 2023, negotiations regarding the next Farm Bill have already begun. During this session, a panel representing hunters, anglers, and conservationists will highlight their perspectives and priorities for the 2023 Farm Bill while sharing their thoughts on opportunities for state legislators and other partners to engage throughout the Farm Bill process.
