The State of Black Education MONTEREY

One area in which our nation's education system continues to fail is closing the academic gap between racial groups, especially for Black students. Low literacy rates, a dearth of Black teachers and a lack of access to education options all contribute to this stark and unacceptable reality. This session brings together solutions-minded experts in early literacy, teacher development and school choice for a frank discussion on the state of Black education in America and improving outcomes for Black students.
