Agenda

NCSL's Child Welfare Fellows Program is designed to help legislators and legislative staff develop expertise in child welfare issues and policy solutions. The program is geared toward those chairing or serving on human services, children and families or human services budget/appropriations committees, and who want to expand their knowledge by learning from other legislators and legislative staff, as well as research and policy from experts across the country.

This kickoff meeting will set the stage for this one-year group learning experience. Goals for this session include the following:

- Build knowledge alongside other legislators and staff about new research and policy opportunities.
- Be part of a peer-learning environment fostering the exchange of ideas and solutions related to child welfare.
- Meet, connect and learn from other legislative leaders.
- Develop an individual child welfare action plan for immediate use in your state.

Roundtable Discussions: Prevention, Group Care and Other Provisions of the New Federal Child Welfare Law

What opportunities and challenges does the new federal Family First Prevention Services Act (FFPSA) present for states? What are the fiscal implications for states that want to embrace the optional prevention provisions of FFPSA? What options do states have related to the new requirements for group care? Fellows will rotate through three topical discussion tables to exchange ideas and policy strategies with their colleagues and national experts.

2-3:00 p.m.

Voices from Within the Child Welfare System

A foster parent and mentor along with two young people formerly in foster care will discuss their experiences in the system and recommendations for more effective policies to protect and nurture children and youth in care and to engage, retain, strengthen and empower foster parents.

Moderator: Sarah Hill, NCSL

Speakers: Senator A.J. Griffin, Oklahoma
Kodi Baughman, National Foster Youth and Alumni Policy Council Member
Teresa Fuller, National Foster Youth and Alumni Policy Council Member

The Impact of Trauma on Social and Emotional Development

What is the impact of child maltreatment and foster care placement on children's brain and social-emotional development? What are the long-term effects of adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) in adulthood? How can legislators and child welfare agencies ensure foster families and kinship care providers appropriately address childhood trauma and grief? Fellows will consider responses to these questions in the context of the new federal Family First Prevention Services Act.

Moderator: Jerard Brown, NCSL

Speaker: Mary Dozier, University of Delaware

9:30-10:15 a.m.

Parental Substance Abuse and the Child Welfare System

Participants will learn about recent research conducted by the federal office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation (ASPE) linking foster care caseloads with certain substance use indicators, including opioid hospitalizations and deaths. Policy experts from Mathematica will also highlight state initiatives through the federal Regional Partnership Grants. Policy implications will be discussed, with commentary from two NCSL opioid policy fellows.
