MAKING ENDS MEET: Enhancing Economic Security, Fostering Shared Prosperity

Friday, February 19, 2016
8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.

Grappone Conference Center
Concord, NH

It has now been more than six years since the end of the national recession, yet many Granite Staters continue to struggle to make ends meet.

Income for the typical New Hampshire household, after adjusting for inflation, remains less today than it was in 2007. Hourly pay for much of the bottom half of the wage distribution is still lower now – again, after adjusting for inflation – than it was, not just in 2007, but in 2001 as well.

At the same time, New Hampshire continues to exhibit one of the higher costs of living in the nation, leaving many working families to face a substantial gap between what they earn and what they must spend on essentials – from housing and groceries to health care and child care.

NHFPI's 3rd annual policy conference will examine what it really takes to make ends meet in the Granite State and explore some of the key elements of a broader strategy for easing the difficulties facing working families – a strategy that aims both to boost wages and salaries and to bring the cost of basic necessities within closer reach.

Speakers (as of Dec. 8):

David Cooper, Economic Analyst,
Economic Policy Institute

Helen Blank, Director of Child Care and Early Learning,
National Women's Law Center

Judith Solomon, Vice President for Health Policy,
